Subic Freeport locators buck new taxes

By Carlos Padua

Subic Freeport locators are bucking new taxes imposed by the Philippine Economic Zone Authority (PEZA) on the 100th anniversary of the Philippine Republic.

The locators, who are mostly small businesses, are protesting the new taxes, which they say are too high and will hurt their businesses.

The locators are demanding that the PEZA board reduce the taxes and that the government provide more incentives to attract investors to the freeport.

The PEZA board, which is headed by the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI), has approved the new taxes, which will take effect on September 1.

During the last 10 years, the number of people in the United States who have been diagnosed with AIDS has increased by more than 100 percent. In 1981, there were only 264 reported cases. By 1990, there were 16,000. In 1991, the number of new cases was 25,000. The total number of people living with AIDS in the United States is estimated to be 100,000.

The group also has been successful in raising the profile of the issue in the media. In 1997, a Wall Street Journal article highlighted the group's efforts and the need for more research on the health effects of asbestos.

What's new in graphics?
 Autodesk recently completed a full conversion from Raster to vector graphics in its AutoCAD software. The new version, AutoCAD LT 2000, is the first in the series to support vector graphics. The software is designed to be a more powerful and flexible tool for creating and editing 2D and 3D graphics. It includes a new set of tools for creating and editing 2D and 3D graphics, and a new set of tools for creating and editing 2D and 3D graphics. Figure 6. Schematic representation of the proposed mechanism of action of the in vitro model. The diagram illustrates the interaction between various components: a cell membrane (phospholipid bilayer), a protein channel, and a small molecule (represented by a circle). The process involves the binding of the small molecule to the protein channel, which facilitates its transport across the membrane. The final state shows the small molecule released into the cytoplasmic space.

Figure 1 consists of a 10x10 grid of 100 small plots. Each plot shows the relationship between the number of species (S) on the x-axis and the number of individuals (N) on the y-axis. The plots are arranged in a grid where the x-axis for each row represents a different number of species (S), and the y-axis for each column represents a different number of individuals (N). The plots show a positive correlation between S and N, with the relationship becoming steeper as S increases. The plots are labeled with the number of species (S) and the number of individuals (N) for each species.

The first part of the paper discusses the importance of the role of the state in the development of the economy. It argues that the state has a crucial role to play in providing public goods, such as infrastructure, education, and health care, which are essential for economic growth. The second part of the paper examines the impact of globalization on the economy. It discusses how globalization has led to increased trade and investment, but also to greater inequality and environmental degradation. The third part of the paper considers the challenges facing the economy in the future. It identifies key issues such as climate change, technological innovation, and demographic changes, and discusses potential policy responses.

Figure 1 is a 3D scatter plot showing the relationship between the number of eggs (N) and the number of eggs per female (E) for the 1990 and 1991 cohorts. The x-axis represents the number of eggs (N) from 0 to 100,000. The y-axis represents the number of eggs per female (E) from 0 to 100. The z-axis represents the cohort (1990 and 1991). Data points are shown for both cohorts, with 1990 data points generally higher than 1991 data points. A regression line is shown for the 1990 cohort, and a regression line is shown for the 1991 cohort. The regression line for the 1990 cohort is steeper than the regression line for the 1991 cohort.

The independent variables are the age, sex, and education of the respondent, and the number of children in the household. The results are presented in the form of the coefficient of the independent variable, the standard error, and the t-statistic. The significance level is 0.05.

Traders decry hard flu scare spun by Davao Oriental execs

Davao, Oct. 1 (UPI)—Davao Oriental executives' claims that a deadly flu scare is spreading in the province have been dismissed by local traders, who say the reports are unfounded and are only a ploy to attract attention.

The executives of the Davao Oriental Chamber of Commerce and Industry (DOCCI) claimed that a deadly flu scare is spreading in the province, particularly in the town of Davao Oriental. They said that the flu is highly contagious and can be fatal, especially for children.

However, local traders and health officials in Davao Oriental have dismissed these claims. They said that there is no evidence of a deadly flu scare in the province. They said that the reports are only a ploy to attract attention and to cause panic among the people.

The traders said that they have not heard of any cases of a deadly flu in the province. They said that they have not seen any children who are sick or dying. They said that they have not heard of any deaths from a deadly flu in the province.

The health officials in Davao Oriental also dismissed the claims. They said that they have not received any reports of a deadly flu in the province. They said that they have not seen any children who are sick or dying. They said that they have not heard of any deaths from a deadly flu in the province.

Drugstores reel from senior citizens' law

By Robinson V. Dela Cruz/Pharmaceuticals Editor

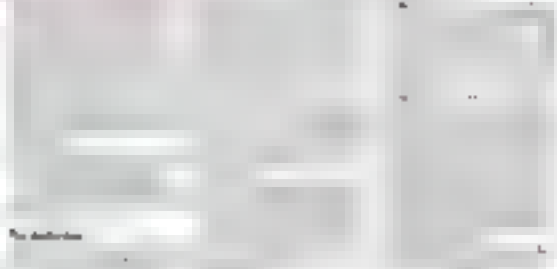

The law, which took effect last week, has forced drugstores to sell their products at a 10 percent discount to senior citizens. The law also requires drugstores to provide a list of products and prices to senior citizens. The law is a response to the growing number of senior citizens who are unable to afford their medications.

Senior citizens' law forces drugstores to sell products at a 10 percent discount.

MANILA, July 16 (Inquirer) — Metro Manila's 16 local government units (LGUs) have collectively rejected a proposal by the Department of the Interior and Local Government (DILG) to cut the Internal Revenue Allotment (IRA) for the 2005 fiscal year.

The DILG proposal, which would reduce the IRA for Metro Manila by 10 percent, was rejected by the Metro Manila Council of Mayors (MCMC) in a meeting held last week.

The MCMC members, who are the heads of the 16 LGUs, expressed their opposition to the proposal, stating that it would significantly impact the city's budget and the quality of public services.

The MCMC members also expressed their support for the current IRA allocation, which they believe is necessary to maintain the city's infrastructure and social services.

■ Small business owners who are considering a new business location should be aware of the fact that the U.S. Census Bureau's new County Business Patterns (CBP) report, released in May, shows that the number of small businesses in the U.S. has declined for the first time in 10 years. The report shows that the number of small businesses in the U.S. has declined from 19.1 million in 1992 to 18.8 million in 1993. This decline is attributed to a number of factors, including the fact that the number of small businesses in the U.S. has declined in every state except for California, Texas, and Florida. The report also shows that the number of small businesses in the U.S. has declined in every industry except for the health care industry. This decline is a concern for small business owners, as it suggests that the small business sector is becoming more competitive and that small businesses may be struggling to survive in a more competitive environment.

These authors conclude that the observed differences in the prevalence of Salmonella and Shigella in the two studies may be due to differences in the methods used to collect the samples. The authors suggest that the use of a more standardized method for collecting samples from the environment would be helpful in future studies.

As a result, the authors suggest that the most effective way to improve the quality of the work environment is to focus on the individual employee, rather than on the organization as a whole. This is because the individual employee is the one who is most directly affected by the work environment, and it is the individual employee who is most responsible for creating a positive work environment.

As the 1990s drew to a close, the industry was looking for ways to improve its image and to attract new customers. One of the most significant changes was the introduction of "green" products, which were designed to be environmentally friendly. These products were made from recycled materials and were biodegradable. They were also marketed as being healthier for the consumer. This was a significant shift in the industry's focus, as it moved away from purely functional products to ones that were also socially and environmentally responsible.

These findings have important implications for the design of a community-based intervention to reduce the burden of HIV/AIDS in the South African townships. First, the high prevalence of HIV/AIDS in the townships suggests that a community-based intervention should be designed to reach a large proportion of the population. Second, the high prevalence of HIV/AIDS in the townships suggests that a community-based intervention should be designed to address the social and cultural factors that influence HIV/AIDS risk. Third, the high prevalence of HIV/AIDS in the townships suggests that a community-based intervention should be designed to address the economic factors that influence HIV/AIDS risk. Finally, the high prevalence of HIV/AIDS in the townships suggests that a community-based intervention should be designed to address the health care factors that influence HIV/AIDS risk.
